Anwen was referred by her GP. When I met with her she was feeling vulnerable and overwhelmed. Her father had recently passed away whom she had cared for during a long illness. She was feeling scared and lonely which was affecting her mental health. She was facing debts built up after leaving her work to look after her father and her living accommodation was poor which was affecting her physical health. She was referred to a bereavement support group and Citizens Advice where she was given debt advice. Her Housing Association carried out much needed repairs and Anwen now reports that she is working through her grief, has made new friends, is on a firmer financial footing and her health is improving greatly.

'I can't wait to try the new opportunities that I have been told about.'

'I had no idea there was so much support out there.'

'This has made a real difference to our lives, thank you'
